Will we get access to the AI software in October?

My book is being written right now by TUW. I hired a premium writer and she just submitted the intro and chapter 1. What type of feedback are you supposed to give them? My only thought is if the writing doesn't fit the outline or something in your outline needs to be mentioned that isn't written about, then have them fix that. I read her writing and struggle to get excited about it but don't know what to tell her to change. But maybe that's the topic I chose.

Also, when you put your chapter into grammarly to check for plagiarism and grammar, do you tell the GW to fix the errors you found? Or involve them with the results of grammarly? Or edit with grammarly after you've given them feedback?

Jamie

Regarding references or research on outline. If you use ChatGPT to build the outline on your book, how do you do references or research. How much time do you do yourself doing this? I thought you didnt need to be a professional in any given topic to do this, but researching myself suggest differently.

Hi Coaches,

Christian and Rasmus, Thank You so much for inventing such a fantastic system! I am following the modules to a "T". I formed a new C corporation to use as a brand name to publish my books. This is proving more challenging than I think it needs to be. I want to start doing reviews with Pubby so I can start building up Snaps, while I am waiting for my outline from PS.

Question 1. If I sign up under my name, how can that transfer that to my corporation to redeem the snaps when I am ready to get reviews? If I sign up under the corporation name, Powerful Business Solutions, will this confuse the people who I am reviewing their book for? Is there a crossover of information from Pubby to Amazon? I do not want Amazon thinking I am skirting their system.

Hello Wonderful coaches,

Just curious to know, when printing our content in a paper before publishing. Which paper is recommended cream paper or black and white paper.

And also for book cover, which finishing style is recommended. Matte or Glossy ?

Hi coaches,

I'm close to publishing my 1st 35k book - Thank you Karman for the QSA feedback =)

I'm thinking of my next book and wanted to ask, when you have a topic of POC, and then you work to get that subtitle- Is the subtitle what defines your main idea or problems you want to focus on in the book? I know you can't fit everything you write about in the book to be in the title, but how broad can you go without losing the focus of staying with POC?

Patti

Good Sunday morning coaches! Can I get started on my book cover (I'm outsourcing it) now? Or do I need to wait for an exact page count? I know it's way early - I haven't even got my outline back yet. I know my book will be between 120 and 140 pages, 5.5" x 8.5".

Linda

The Salem Publishing offered me a deal for a ghostwriter for 22 cents per word. That seems steep. Is it? That would mean It'd cost 10grand to publish a 30,000 word book.

Patti

Hi coaches, the book I'm publishing is about caring for the elderly, family members in particular. I'm thinking about reaching out to people to gather stories to feature on facing pages of the book, one per chapter. My thinking is that the people whose stories are included will share the title and potentially up my sales.

What are your thoughts? Crazy idea?

If I move forward with it, I'll start gathering the stories now and pass them along to my ghostwriter when I select one. Also, if I move forward with the idea, suggestions on how to get a release from the submitters for inclusion of their story (and potentially photo) in my book?

Thank you for your thoughts!

Linda

Coaches, one final question. I know photos in my paperback will be converted to grayscale. So I am thinking about using b&w images for my paperback, and more vibrant color images for my ebook (and potentially hard copy down the road.)

I'm outsourcing the writing of my book to a ghostwriter, and I will also outsource the formatting. When are images inserted into the book?

If I choose one set of B&W images for my paperback and a different set of vibrant color pics for my ebook, would I pay the formatting service I outsource to twice for two files?
