Submit your questions live on the call in the Zoom Q&A field. We will pick and choose the best the questions to answer.

The logo consists of the letters 'FYI' in a bold, white, sans-serif font, centered on a blue rectangular background that has a slightly distressed or torn-edge appearance.

There are many students on this call, all at different points in their publishing journey. We receive many questions and do our best to choose the ones that are applicable and helpful to the majority of attendees on this call.

We would rather spend more time going deep into a good question rather than rushing from one question to the next. Therefore, we will pick and choose the best questions.

Hello Coaches. My book is a 8.5x11 because thats what my competitors book is. I got my cover back from 99 Designs and sent it to a designer on Fiverr & she's asking me this " "Check complete amazon book cover die line ( the mock-up not match with die) amazon book cover required complete information of card size & number of pages. " Whats a book die fitting? My manuscript is almost completed by P.S. I will give her the page count then. I don't understand what else she is talking about. Can you relate this message to me please. Thank you.

This is the 3rd week I joined and I don't have access to the software cos I'm still trying to sort out my login. I'm completely lost as to what I'm doing.

I just started listening to the video to do with the front cover of the book. My question is - can I use canva to design the front cover of the book or do I need to hire a professional to do that for me otherwise the book won't sell.

Thank you.

PLEASE HELP! I don't know what more to do! I'm pulling my hair out with the Copyright Office. It's my first book! and it took me over two years to get it out!! I wrote it the 'old' way with ghostwriter and editors through upwork. In November I submitted a copyright application as per course.

Their first query was, 'we think AI was used for this book'.

I asked on the FB group what to do. The administrator advised me to tell them I'd paid for ghostwriter and editors (say you've receipts etc). After I did that, the person at the copyright office started asking me if I am the legal copyright owner of the ghostwriter's text and they suggested it belonged to the editors. I told them no, I was the owner. They kept asking other questions and eventually I wrote a longer detailed answer talking about NDA's and how the ghostwriter's style wasn't what I liked, that I used two editors since and basically changed the content over the period of a year.

Despite that very detailed answer, their last question was: " Does this book contain any text that was created by the ghostwriter, or did you completely rewrite the text (no text remains from the ghostwriter)?If the situation is otherwise, please explain."

What do I do now? There have now been 6 emails back and forth. If the ghostwriter had been good, I would have used their writing, but it still wouldn't have meant the copyright belonged to them!! Do I drop it and apply for copyright in the UK instead of the US? (I don't live in the US) Do I keep trying to answer their questions? Is there someone in the AIA programme that can help me seriously, e.g. perhaps with some letter that has been proven to work? I'm happy for someone from the team to call me.

Pseudonyms:using a pseudonym.How will that affect any payments to your Amazon/ACX account, which of course would be in your real name.

Also if you are writing a second book, the topic of which is different to the first book, wouldn't it be a little strange to use the same pseudonym, the same writer writing about AI and Gardening for instance, wouldn't inspire much confidence in any potential buyers, as far as I can see?

Vera H

Hi Coaches, if you can please review my title:

POC Title: Somatic Exercises For Beginners (31)

Subtitle: Gentle, Mindful Moves to Manage Stress and Pain, Release Tensions and Pent-Up Emotions, Improve Flexibility for Mind-Body Balance in Just 10 Minutes a Day (153)

Badge: 28-Day Plan + Real Photos + Printable Worksheets + Videos

Does it sound better with the word 'Relieve' Tension and Pent Up Emotions' instead of 'Release'?

Also, I was trying to avoid the words 'stress and pain' to start with because I am aware about medical condition/claim, but customer research shows they're the main keywords. So is it a good idea to use 'manage stress and pain' as usually suggested? Or is better to leave them out all together to avoid the risk of running ads problem?

If I launch my book by sending people a free link, how do they get a "print out" if my book is paperback. In the training on launching, we're told to give people our free link to our book and to create the link in amazon. Doesn't amazon charge me? Also, I'm supposed to do this before my book is complete so how do I give them a link to something that isn't completed?

How's the best way to get feedback on what needs to be changed on my book?

Tammy Russell

Please ignore my earlier title and subtitle review request, as this should replace it since I wanted to add a second option to consider. Below are the two titles and subtitles for which I would greatly appreciate review and feedback.

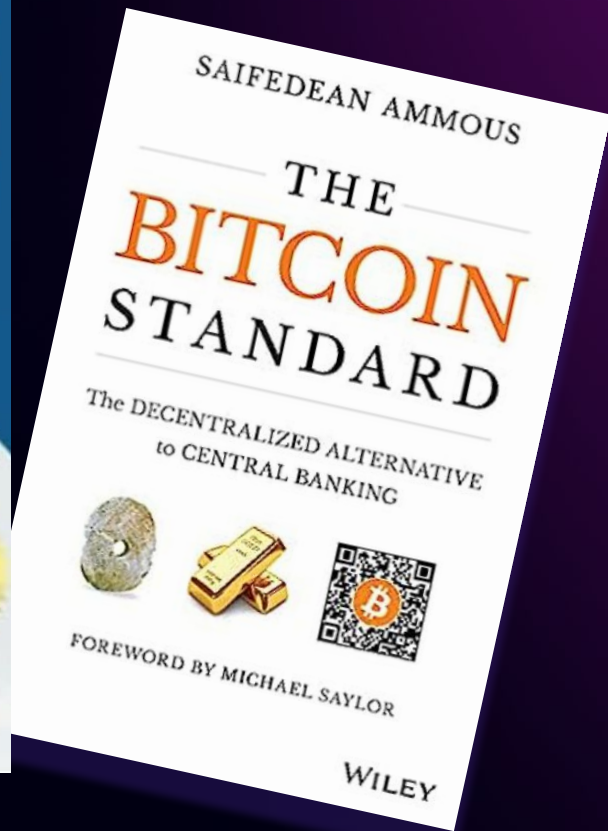

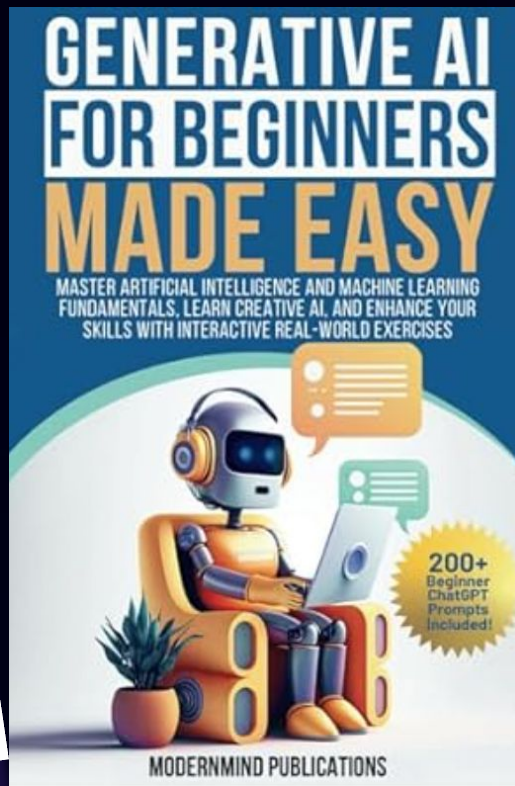

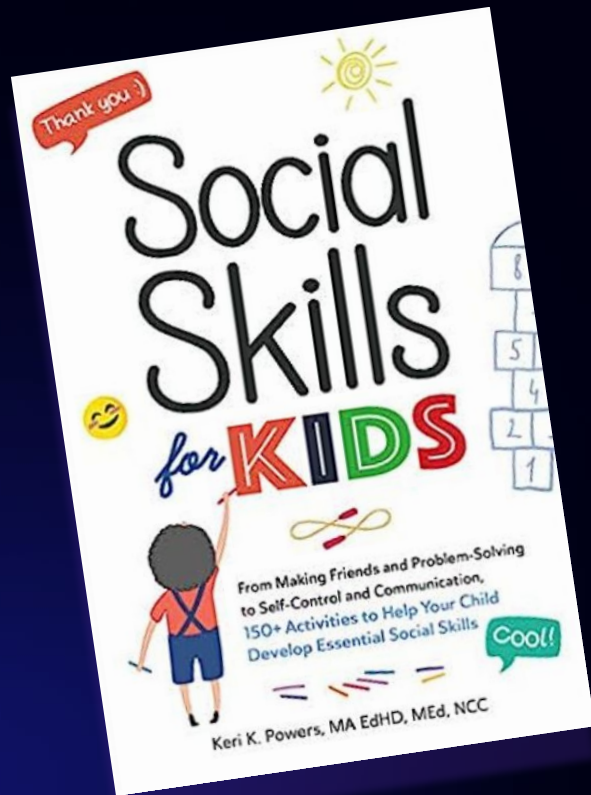

Option 1 Previously sent:

Title: Creative Solutions for dementia caregiver challenges that save time, money, and sanity:
Packed with quick reference topical guides to help dementia caregivers tackle daily challenges, dramatically improve loved ones and caregiver quality of life, and create an adjustable personalized plan for success, even if you have limited family and financial support.

Second alternative with fewer words:

The Creative Solution Guide To Conquer Daily Dementia Caregiver Challenges: Make Caregiving Easier With Topical Quick Reference Sheets, Planning Templates, And Dignified Activity Ideas, even if you have limited family and financial support.
